The screenshot shows a file sharing interface. On the left, there is a blue folder icon with a cloud inside, representing a cloud source. Below it, a rating of 6.4 is shown with five stars and the text '2865 VIEWS'. In the center, a blue button labeled 'Download' with a download icon is visible. To the right of the button, it says 'SECURE SCANNED'. Above the button, the text reads 'File was found and ready to download!' and 'UPDATED 14 HOURS AGO'. Below that, it says 'Fastest Source: usenet.nl'. Further down, there is a note: 'Click the download button and select one of the found cloud sources.' At the bottom of the interface, there is a message: 'You need to log in before you can post comments.' Below this message are three icons with labels: 'Navigation' (a hamburger menu icon), 'Registration' (an icon of two people), and 'FAQ' (a circular refresh icon).

Q: Difference between Science Research and a Master's thesis I am doing an MSc in Computer Science. I had a supervisor who asked me to do a project for his Bachelor thesis and we haven't started it yet. He wants me to complete it before the end of my first year (14 July 2020). Is there any difference between Science Research and a Master's thesis?

A: I'm not sure that it is possible to answer this question completely, but a quick search of PhD thesis websites brought me to a number of interesting first-hand experiences: How to write a PhD thesis Tips and recommendations for the process of writing a PhD thesis The last two are very similar to the situation you describe. In the first case it is pointed out that the student will be able to mention a number of episodes in the career where his supervisor asked him to do research projects, but did not complete them, so he would be expected to complete them himself. In the second case the student is encouraged to read some papers and write a summary of the research done in them. In short, your situation sounds unusual and I would go on to ask your supervisor why he told you to do such a project. In today's global marketplace, a corporation's ability to be competitive depends to a great extent on the company's ability to communicate with its customers, potential customers, as well as the media. This is in large part due to the fact that, in many situations, the media, whether print, television, radio, internet, etc., have the power to influence a corporation's customers/potential customers. Therefore, it is essential that communication between a corporation and its customers be as efficient as possible. The way in which a corporation communicates with its customers is important because customers who do not understand a corporation's message may either avoid using products or services offered by the corporation, or may provide negative reviews of the corporation's products or services. Thus, it is important for a corporation to understand the needs of its customers. Traditional methods of communicating with customers and prospective customers include advertising, verbal communication, and direct mailings. Advertising is the oldest form of communication. Advertising has relied heavily on expensive television and printed advertisements. Print advertisements have traditionally provided consumers or potential
